Early Detection Saves Lives; (Your Organization's Name)
Is Offering (FREE?) Oral Cancer Screenings

*(Your town, Your State)—(Date)—*In an effort to promote the early detection of oral cancer, a serious health risk that, if identified in its early stages, can be treated in up to 90 percent of cases, (Your Organization's Name) is offering oral cancer screenings as part of the (name event, dates, times and location).

"The oral cancer screening is one of the most critical components of a routine dental hygiene and dental examination," said (Your Spokesperson's Name), (Your Spokesperson's Title), (Your Organization). "It consists of a head and neck exam during which the dental hygienist or dentist will look for suspicious growths, lumps on the lip or in the mouth or throat, and other symptoms that indicate the disease might be present. If any symptoms are found, the patient will be alerted and strongly urged to seek medical attention immediately."

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) states that approximately 75 percent of all oral cancers are attributed to the use of smoked and smokeless tobacco products. This year alone, close to 42,000 Americans will be diagnosed with oral cancer and more than 8,000 will die of the disease according to estimates from the National Cancer Institute (NCI).

Early detection is crucial in preventing the spread of oral cancer that, if undetected, can spread to other parts of the body, making it difficult or nearly impossible to treat. Dental hygienists are the front line of defense against this disease.

The dental hygiene profession was founded more than 100 years ago, in 1913, and today there are more than 185,000 registered dental hygienists across the U.S. who provide professional oral health care to help people maintain healthy smiles and healthy bodies.

Instill Good Oral Health Habits Early; Free
Screenings for School Age Children Offered

*(Your town, Your State)—(Date)—To help children develop proper oral health care habits early and to avoid dental decay—the most common chronic disease of childhood—(Your Organization's Name)* is offering oral health screenings to school age children on (dates, times, location).

“Dental decay, more commonly known as cavities, affects 50 percent of children by middle adolescence,” said (Your Spokesperson's Name), (Your Spokesperson's Title), (Your Organization). “The best way to ensure your child will avoid this is to establish good oral hygiene routines early, which should include regular visits to your dental hygienist for further information and education on maintaining optimum oral health.”

Recent studies show that millions of children also suffer from periodontal (gum) disease, with gingivitis occurring in 50 percent of four- to five-year-olds and continuing to increase with age. The good news is that this and other oral health diseases can be prevented through good oral hygiene habits that start early and continue throughout life.

Dental hygienists are valuable resources in helping children develop and maintain good oral care routines, and can assist parents in identifying preventative measures to protect their children's smiles. This can include the use of mouth guards for children who participate in sports, special orthodontic toothbrushes, and the application of sealants to prevent molar cavities.

The dental hygiene profession was founded more than 100 years ago, in 1913, and today there are more than 185,000 registered dental hygienists across the U.S. who provide professional oral health care to help people maintain healthy smiles and healthy bodies.
